SPOT MAP FOLLOWS MARCH OF DISEASE

Origin and Spread Traced by Pins in Office of Chief Surgeon

A leopard cannot chance his spots, but there is the likeness of a beast hanging on the walls in the collect of the chief surgeon at Tours whose chameleon proclivities indicate every day the status of the battle hetween the A.E.F. and disease. Dots and streaks of color on maps covering all territory occupied by American soldiers in Europe punctuate and trace the origin, development, spread and disappearance of all communicable diseases.

This barometer of the A.E.F.'s health is watched and studied almost hourly by the medical authorities. A pin is a little thing, but one with a glass head of a certain color someward across France, these maps have proved of inestimable value.

The proposed of inestimable value, one typhold fever carrier not only infected most his whole company, but troons in 15 other places in France. He tried to brave it out and not answer sick call. Unfortunately for the A.E.F., he was a cook and is company was a motor transport outfit. As a cook he was such an excellent medium of the disease that 50 of his comrades were infected, who in their turn as motor transport men spread the contagion. The story is compactly told on the "spot maps" of the roads traveled by the typhoid and the vehicles of the Motor Transport Corps.

raditionally bright and variegated color schemes and it is a comminment to American adapuability that the troops with the Italian tarmies fell hard for celor. When they came out a lost legion from Austria, Dahmatia and Montenegro and concentrated in Genoa, Colombus forme town, they discovered the shouthest for the property of serious thinkers got to work on the selection of one. As their fighting activities had taken place mostly around Venice, there could be but one general choice for them. At first there was a great deal of wavering between the famous bronze horses of the gondolier city and the curious animal called the Lion of St. Mark, but favor flushly fell upon the latter.

to a breathless fluish this week for on Monday the names of all individual contestants and of the platoon which is to represent each division in the musketry event must be in at G-5, G-H-Q. Provision is being made for some 3,000 entries in the individual events and ten platoons will probably compete in the battle problem.

Nowhere is enthusiasm more keen for the shoot than up in the Third Army, and no energy or pains is being spared in the selection and training of the men who are to represent the Army of Occupation at the Le Mans classic. On the lists will appear the names of some renowned Army and Marine shots.

vest on his Judgment, to an interesting angle. The shoot will be something of a contest between old shots and the new. In the former matches, when the Army was small, about the same competitors turned up year after year and divided medals. Not so at Le Mans. The National Army is sending men to the shoot who never participated in a match outside their own divisions and who never fired a service rifte prior to 1917. Everyone is wondering low they will stack up against the old timers up in Germany.

The lat Division is sending to Le Mans a ceam composed of both old and new the composed of the division entries.

Similarly, the crack platoons of the division are living near the combat range, tighting on an average of four hattles a day for the honor of representing the last in the musketry compelition.

Private Peters had arrived in his hom town and had rushed to the barber sho upon the first opportunity, ordering "Ever thing yuh got." Towards the end of the ionsorial offensive the barber remarked that he was out of tonic. "No tonic of any kind?" asked Peters. "Every bottle is empty, except one with carbolic acid," the mriter jokingly replied. "Nothin dein!" was the experienced "That's reply." That's Teutonic."

NOT ONE "BASKET CASE" IN ALL AMERICAN ARMY

No soldier among the 2,000,000 who came to France in the American uniform lost both arms and both legs and no such case ever entered an A.E.F. hospital, Maj. Gen. M. W. Ireland, Surgeon General of the Army, has amnounced to allay rumors persistently circulated that A.E.F. hospitals were full of such cases. "I have personally examined the records and an able to say that there is not a single based case either in the Army at home or in the AE.F.," he said. "I wish to emphasize that there was no American soldier so wounded during the whole war."

ARTILLERY GO MINUS GUNS

Shrapnel and Shells Held in Huge Dumps Near Base Ports for Their Sailing Orders

Thousands of tons of ammuniton are en route to the States from dumps all over France, but none, with a single exception, is going back on transports. The exception s small arms ammunition, which is a reasonably harmless commodity—sometimes. The bigger stuff is being taken back on freighters which carry no troops, save for a few convoys. Gas shells, however, will not enjoy even this much distinction. They are to be taken out to sea in freighters or larges and dumped overhoard with no further ceremony than the exercise of due care to see that they do not go off in the process. The guns themselves are also carried on feighters, so that Artillery outlits have to return without their armament, which spoils any contemplated parades back lome, but permits of the outfit's getting home the quicker. The reason why the guns are not carried on transports is that the loading process is long and laborious, and would delay the transports' salling, onably harmless commodity-sometimes.

The use of WRIGLEY'S by the fighting men has created much comment in war correspondence.

Even before American soldiers and sailors landed, the British, Canadian and French forces had adopted WRIGLEY'S as their wartime sweetmeat.

And now that Uncle Sam's stalwart boys are hitting the line, WRIGLEY'S is a very noticeable ally of the Allies.
